Assuming that the brane is located at the origin, we may rescale the brane to the Planck brane by imposing $s=r=\epsilon$ and taking the limit $\epsilon \to 0$. Then the first and second terms in Eq. (1) give contribution to the boundary action density. The third term gives in the present case the negative contribution, $-\frac{1}{48} \epsilon^3 \int \epsilon^3$ to the boundary action density. Here we should note that the negative contribution was not guaranteed, since there may be also a contribution from the boundary curvature. However, in the present case such a contribution is identically zero due to the vanishing of the Weyl tensor of the boundary metric. So far we have restricted ourselves to the boundary term of the gravitational action. It is also possible to consider the boundary term of the gauge action. The gauge coupling of e79caf774b
